

This architectural drawing shows the exterior elevation of a two-story building with a mansard roof. The facade features a central entrance with a pediment and a set of stairs leading up to it. There are several large windows on the second floor and smaller windows on the first floor. The building is flanked by trees and a fence. On the right side, a section cut is shown, indicating the interior levels and the roof structure. The drawing is a black and white line art, typical of architectural plans.
